

Herefordshire Live: reporter

We're looking for a full-time writer to join the Herefordshire Live team.

As well as producing content for a growing what's on and culture website, you'll be digitally-savvy and mad passionate about the county's future.

We're looking for someone with a punchy and witty voice, who can bring in exclusive content and connect with Herefordshire Live's broad audience.

To apply send us your CV and an original idea for a Herefordshire Live article. Feel free to include a few words about yourself and links to previously published works. The address is hello@herefordshirelive.co.uk.

The Role

As a full-time reporter for Herefordshire Live, you will be responsible for producing content for www.herefordshirelive.co.uk.

Day-to-day duties include seeking out and writing what's on listings, producing several articles a week (including sponsored content), and contributing to social media channels. Full of ideas and creative energy, you'll help shape the future of a new digital media brand.

Office perks include an on-site gym, café, bar and opportunities for career development.

The ideal candidate will have:

- Relevant journalism experience
- Passion for Herefordshire
- Digital know-how and demonstrative knowledge of digital media trends
- Cultural swagger – you don't need us to tell you about the Bad Seeds or Salt Bae
- Solid contacts across the region

About Herefordshire Live

Herefordshire Live is the new digital media arm of allpay Limited, one of the fastest growing companies in the region. www.herefordshirelive.co.uk launched in late 2015 and is a first click for what's on and cultural features. As we grow, we've got ambitious plans for what the brand can become. Our hard working team is small but passionate about creating an alternative platform for regional journalism and promoting the best of Herefordshire. We are committed to equal opportunities.

www.allpay.net/careers